recycling	When we collect and sort our rubbish, instead of throwing it away, it can be changed into something new.

Helpful hints: Life on land relies upon humans helping by looking after the environment.

New Knowledge

The Earth is one big environment. There are many parts to the environment, examples include the land, the air that we breathe and all the plants and animals too.

When we say we are looking after the environment, we are looking after all the natural places that God created on our planet Earth.

Humans can damage the environment by littering and not recycling.

We can help the planet by reducing what we use (using less), reusing (using what we already have) and recycling.

Plastic should not be in the ocean, so we call this pollution. Ocean pollution can hurt animals.

Prior Learning

In Early Years, pupils learned:

There are many different environments like the ocean, sea, rivers, farms, forests, deserts etc in photographs, stories and maps (Geography link).
